MRS. CARMAN LOSES LIBERTY AT HER TRIAL

MRS. CARMAN, ON TRIAL AGAIN, IS DENIED LIBERTY

By ROBERT C. CRANSTON.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

MINEOLA, N. Y., May 3.—Mrs. Florence C. Carman, who was placed on trial here today for the second time on the charge of murdering Mrs. Louise D. Bailey in Freeport on June 30, last year, lost the first skirmish in her fight for freedom. Her attorney, George M. Levy, tried to have Mrs. Carman given bail pending the trial, but Justice Blackmar ordered her remanded to jail until the case is ended.

Mrs. Carman was not downcast at this move, but smiled and asked for the apartment she had formerly occupied in the county jail.

Nine men were examined before the first juror was secured. He is Peter Rohrbach, Jr., thirty-four, married, clerk of the board of trustees of Seacliff.

"I will be glad to have the suspense settled for once and all," she said before court opened. "I feel now that I shall be acquitted and that no jury will convict me on the story that was told by Celia Coleman. They have nothing else. I will be able to prove to any jury that I am innocent of this charge."

Mrs. Carman's demeanor, her absolute self-confidence today, was in marked contrast to her attitude just before the first trial. Then she was nervous, haggard, dangerously near hysteria. Now she is confident, self-possessed, almost elated.

ADMISSION BY TICKET.

Hours before the time set for the opening the vicinity of the courthouse was thronged, women predominating in the number awaiting a glimpse of the famous prisoner. Admission to the courtroom was by ticket only.

A bitter legal battle is in prospect, beginning over the selection of the jury. It is said that the prosecution will try to eliminate men living in the vicinity of the Carman home. On the

COE'S WIFE PRAYS STORY OF FINDING OF HUSBAND IS TRUE

Mrs. Henry Clarke Coe, Sr., in New York today made public an affectionate letter she had received from Mrs. Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., wife of the missing Standard Oil man who is said to have been found in Fairbanks, Alaska. Mrs. Coe, Sr., made public the letter as evidence of the affectionate relations between her and her daughter-in-law, and to contradict a rumor of estrangement. The letter reads:

"My Dear Mama—I cannot possibly tell you how happy I am over hearing of the new clew across the water, which you told me of in your special delivery letter. I do hope and pray it is a true one.

Mother, dear, I am perfectly willing to do anything you think best. Mr. Burns has just notified me that they think they have found Henry in Alaska. I do hope this is true. There have been several statements in the papers, but they are not true. I have not talked to anybody.

"Little June is well and happy. Do let me know how the new clew turns out. I will try to be brave and patient, although it is very hard.

"With much love and affection. HELEN."

RUSSIANS PUT TO FLIGHT IN WEST GALICIA

By FREDERICK WERNER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, May 3.—The Austro-German armies operating against the Russians in Western Galicia have won a great victory, it is announced in an official statement from the War Office today.

According to this announcement the Russian front on the entire line in Western Galicia has been crushed by the Austro-German armies.

The Russians are officially reported to be in retreat, leaving behind enormous quantities of booty which have fallen into the hands of the Germans and Austrians.

At Mitau the Russians lost 1,700 prisoners.

The German War Office also claims progress in West Flanders, saying that the Germans occupied a farm near St. Julien. Heavy losses have been inflicted upon the French with mines in the Champagne, near Perthes and Souain.

Unsuccessful French attacks have been delivered against the German positions at Hartmannsweilerkopf.

A German aviator has dropped bombs upon the French city of Epinal.

Heavy casualties attended the attacks of the Germans north and southwest of Ypres, according to British reports. The Germans used tubes, especially designed shells for spreading poisonous gases in the allies' trenches. The following official statement relative to fighting in West Flanders was issued by the British foreign today:

"At 7 o'clock Saturday evening the Germans attacked Hill No. 60, south of Ypres. Yesterday evening they attacked in the neighborhood of St. Julien, north of Ypres. Both attacks were carried on with heavy losses and were unsuccessful, as we did not give up any ground. The Germans employed poisonous gases emitted from tubes in the trenches and from specially manufactured shells.

"A German aeroplane was chased by one of our machines within rifle range of our trenches on Sunday and was brought down by our fire."

DENY FRICTION BETWEEN YOUNG COE AND WIFE

Rumors of an estrangement between Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., reported found in Alaska, and his young wife, and further reports that Mrs. Coe's parents and Mr. Coe's parents were not in harmony, drew denials from both Mrs. Allan Ainslie, Mrs. Coe's mother, and Mrs. Henry Clarke Coe, Sr., today.

A New York paper printed a report that Coe would not rejoin his wife and quoted Mrs. Ainslie as saying:

"My daughter is not making any preparations to join her husband in Alaska. We are going to wait until we hear something more definite."

The New York paper said Mrs. Coe was not promptly notified that her husband had been found.

Mrs. Ainslie said today at her apartment at No. 158 Harvard street, Brookline, where young Mrs. Coe is now living:

"There is no truth in any statement that my daughter or myself is estranged from young Mr. Coe or his family.

"There is no friction whatever between us."

New York dispatches quoted Mrs. Coe, Sr., in a similar denial. The fact that young Mrs. Coe had moved from her Commonwealth avenue home and was living with her mother was brought forward as evidence of friction, but Mrs. Coe, Sr., said this move was made at her suggestion.

WROTE TO "DEAR MAMA."

Mrs. Coe, Sr., also made public an affectionate letter addressing her as "My dear mama," which she has received from young Mrs. Coe. She said:

"It is too bad that this has come up for me, for the children's happiness. It is absolutely untrue. I have been to see my daughter-in-law almost

SWEDISH SHIP IS SENT TO BOTTOM

By International News Service.

LONDON, May 3.—Renewed activity of German submarines in waters surrounding Great Britain was made evident today by news of the sinking of the Swedish steamship Ellida in the North Sea, about 190 miles off Hull, and the torpedoing of two British trawlers off Aberdeen, Scotland.

The Ellida, which was a vessel of 1,324 tons, laden with lumber, en route to England, sank in three minutes. The crew of sixteen and two women just had time to get into a boat. They were picked up two hours later by the Danish motor schooner Jens and landed at Lemvig.

The Ellida's loss is regarded here as possibly having far-reaching consequences.

Survivors of the Ellida, who were landed at Lemvig, Denmark, declare that the vessel was torpedoed by a German submarine. The explosion destroyed one lifeboat and threw another into the sea.

News of the sinking of the trawlers was brought to Aberdeen by the trawlers Endosia, Bennington and Aires. They reported being chased by submarines, but escaped owing to their superior speed.

A dispatch from North Shields says the trawler Sunray was sunk by a German submarine sixty miles northeast of the Tyne on Sunday. The crew was saved. This is believed to have been one of the two trawlers reported sunk off Aberdeen.

An important naval battle in the North Sea is expected as a result of the Admiralty's announcement of several small fights of the British zone in which the British torpedo boat destroyer Ioerait and the British trawler Colombia and two German torpedo boats were sunk.

The German mosquito fleet, which was engaged near North Hinder lightship, was believed to be the advance guard of a strong German fleet.

The Colombia was acting as a tender to warships and a mine sweeper. There were no British casualties. It is believed that the German squadron suffered loss of life.

Once More Red Sox Are Forced to Loaf

Today's ball game was called off by the Red Sox management at 11 o'clock. At that hour dark clouds filled the sky, the air was raw, and the ball yard was still wet from the recent rains. It is hoped that the series between the Boston and Washington clubs can get started tomorrow.

Manager Griffith had his training quarters up at Fenway Park this morning in order to give them a chance to limber up their muscles. The boys indulged in batting practice, as they have not played a game since last Friday.

PROBLEM FOR WILSON IN GULFLIGHT CASE

WASHINGTON, May 3.—News of the sinking by a German submarine of the Swedish steamship Ellida in the North Sea, closely following the destruction of the American steamship Gulflight, added to the acuteness of the situation as viewed by United States and diplomatic officials here today.

It was regarded as significant that these two disasters occurred almost coincidentally with the warning to Americans issued by the German embassy on Saturday.

The news tended to confirm the belief that Germany, after a lull in submarine operations, has instituted a new and more widespread campaign against shipping in British waters.

President Wilson returned to Washington at 9:50 o'clock today and immediately was confronted with the most serious situation that the European war has yet developed as a result of the sinking of the American steamer Gulflight, probably by a German submarine.

The sinking of the Gulflight off the Scilly Islands is declared by authorities on international law to bring the United States to face the most serious situation since the war began.

The State Department today directed Minister Van Dyke at The Hague to obtain a full report from Consul-General Lostie at Rotterdam on the attack made upon the American steamship Cushing by a German aeroplane last Thursday.

Three bombs were dropped by the aeroplane, one of them striking the ship. The American flag was flying from the vessel when she was attacked.

This is the first information to the State Department that it intends to exact prompt reparation from Germany. It was considered significant in State Department circles that this message was sent immediately following the receipt of unofficial news of the sinking of the Gulflight.

ANOTHER DRIVE AGAINST WARSAW

By FRANCIS LAVELL MURRAY.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, May 3.—Another invasion of the allies in the Dardanelles sphere of operations has been established, the French landing at Kum Kale, on the Asiatic side of the Straits about 10 miles south of the entrance. This force has begun advance toward the north.

A dispatch from Athens to the Daily Mail states that fighting between British forces and Turks on the peninsula of Gallipoli has become one of artillery duels, the Turks having massed their forces on the Asiatic side of the peninsula, opposite Maidos on the Dardanelles side.

Transport of the Turks and their Kemish aids from the Asiatic coast to ships from the gulf of Saros, Teneden reported hearing heavy gunfire on Sunday and it is believed that the allied fleet again shelled Bulair, the only Turkish forts on the Dardanelles Narrows.

British soldiers have been worn out by the French in fighting on the Dardanelles littoral. The Scots, who advanced inland from Kum Kale, were compelled to retire to the coast, whereas the British, who had pushed north on the Gallipoli peninsula and the Orhan flank to near the west coast of the gulf of Saros, were formerly held to the Turks.

Five thousand Turkish soldiers wounded in the fighting against the allies have arrived in Constantinople.

Several boats in which allied troops in the Dardanelles zone of hostilities were taking refuge have been fired by Turkish guns, according to unofficial dispatches from Constantinople. An Athens French mansion, which was bombarding the Turkish works were compelled to withdraw to the mouth of the Gulf of Xeros, according to these dispatches said. It is announced that a hydroaeroplane of the allies was brought down by fire of the Turkish guns while flying over the Gulf of Alexandretta.

SINKING OF THE GULFLIGHT TO BE LAID BEFORE PRESIDENT

ment were drowned after jumping overboard, according to the Central News Agency dispatch which gives news of the disaster. The rest of the crew, said the dispatch, including Smith, formerly lived at Wakefield, Mass., and has relatives there.

COVERED BY WARNING.

The Gulflight is the first American ship sunk by a belligerent with loss of life since the outbreak of war.

Officials here declared today they considered that torpedoed vessels a vicarious question to the State Department which is absolutely covered by President's Wilson's warning to Germany against the destruction of American lives and American ships.

When Germany proclaimed a war zone around the British Isles and the French coast, the United States government stated it would hold the German government "to a strict accountability" for the loss of any American lives or vessels on which Americans were traveling.

Two American vessels have been sunk by mines, the responsibility for which has never been fixed.

Leon C. Thresher of Hardwick, Mass., was drowned when the British ship Falaba was torpedoed. The State Department investigation of the Falaba incident has just been concluded. The Marconi-owned ship William P. Frye was sunk by the German sea raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, now interned at Norfolk, but for this dereliction Germany has already promised to make reparation.

It is believed generally here that Berlin will follow the same course in regard to the Gulflight, particularly as in the cases of the recent torpedoing of a Norwegian and a Dutch steamer by German submarines Berlin not only agreed to pay, but also expressed regret.

Secretary Bryan appealed to report the attack on the Gulflight as requiring the fullest investigation before representations should be made to Germany. The German authority also refused to offer any comment on the attack on the Gulflight or on the bombs dropped by a German aeroplane upon the American consulate.

One of the most important diplomatic here, who had unofficial advices of the torpedoing of the Gulflight said that the importance of the matter could not be exaggerated. He said the event showed that there would be no limit to dangers to life and property and that diplomacy could scarcely meet the situation, as Germany's warning of Saturday plainly indicated she intended against every protest, to continue her torpedo war-

This diplomat declared he did not believe any question of such grandeur could arise between the United States and Germany as would result in the employment of force to make the diplomatic protest good.

What I mean," he said, "is that the navy of the United States should not be used to protect merchant ships and its citizens on the high seas.

"The question that the American vessels be convoyed by warships was made to effect in the case of the Lusitania by the British and the establishment of the German war zone in all waters of Great Britain. It was then thought impracticable.

Secretary Bryan and Mr. Lansing declined to discuss the propriety of German embassy in advertising warnings to prospective passengers.

Official details say that it is well known that communications from one government to citizens of another ought to be respected by the representative foreign offices of those governments.

FLEW STARS AND STRIPES.

The Stars and Stripes are said to have flown in plain view at the Gulflight's masthead when she was torpedoed yesterday Saturday. A British patrol boat landed the thirty-three survivors. A great hole was torn in the Gulflight's side below the waterline. She appears to have been taken in tow by steam drifters just in time to save her from sinking in deep waters.

Captain Gunter is declared to have taken every precaution to prevent his ship's being mistaken for an allies' craft.

The Government War Risk Bureau carried no insurance on the Gulflight on the last voyage of that ship, although the corresponding trip from American ports to Europe the steamer's hull was insured for $142,000 with the Bureau, it was stated by William J. Delong, director of the Bureau in Washington.

The Gulflight, which was owned by the Gulf Refining Company of Pittsburgh, was of 5,100 gross tons and was launched in August, 1914, at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company, at Camden, N. J. she was one of the largest and most valuable vessels owned by the company.

Her classification in Lloyd's register is of the highest class. She was 406 feet 6 inches in length and had a 59 foot 2-inch beam. Her capacity, full laden, 2,125,000 gallons of oil and she had a speed of 11½ knots.

She sailed in March from Bremen for Port Arthur and arrived on April 1. On April 10 she sailed for Rouen. She was last reported on April 12, 257 miles north of Tortugas.

"U. S. FACES MOST CRITICAL SITUATION," SAYS COUDERT

NEW YORK, May 3.—"If a German submarine, or, for that matter, any submarine, has torpedoed the steamship Gulflight, as is reported, the United States faces the most serious situation since the war began," declared Frederic R. Coudert, the noted authority on international law today.

"I am not prepared to predict the outcome of the affair. I must know the details. But it must be remembered that this government took a very decided stand upon the subject of the destruction of American life and property.

"If, as I now hear, the Gulflight was torpedoed while flying the American flag and on her way to a neutral port, and that three lives were lost, I can only repeat that the most critical situation that this country has known exists.

"If the steamship struck a mine there still remains the chances of international complications of the gravest sort—especially if life was destroyed. But if it was a mine, there remains the possible excuse of carelessness or that the mine was of the sort which did not violate the International code.

"The American government let all the belligerent nations know that we would hold any of them responsible who destroyed American property or life. I am not in position to predict this government's action, but it is not likely that it will recede from its original position."

CAPTAIN GUNTER'S WIDOW SAYS WOMEN HAVE TO PAY WAR COST

NEW YORK, May 3.—"He was all I had in the world. Now I know what this awful war means to the women in Europe, but I never knew before it would come so close to my own home." Thus Mrs. Alfred Gunter bravely faced the news of her husband's death yesterday evening in her home, 16C West Fifth street, Bayonne, N. J.

Several intimate friends came early in the evening to offer comfort. Mrs. Gunter, in a dazed, stunned fashion, told all she had been able to learn.

"I had just finished getting dinner when one of the officers of the company called me on the telephone," she said. "He said he had news for me and would be right over. When he came I was prepared for news of Alfred, but not for the worst." Her voice choked and her grief mastered her for a moment.

"The message was very brief," she continued. "It said that Alfred's ship had been torpedoed, but that the entire crew had escaped safely with the exception of the wireless operator and one of the sailors. Then it said 'Captain Gunter died this morning of heart failure.'"

"That's what war costs," she burst out with a sort of frenzy in her voice. "It has cost me my husband, and no war is worth such an awful price. What is America going to do?" He was not only my husband, he was an American citizen and a German torpedo killed him."

WOMEN HAVE TO PAY.

Then she added quietly, "Women always have to pay so heavily. But I never thought this sort of a price would be asked of me."

Alfred was never afraid during his last trip to Bremen than he was over this trip which took him to Rouen, France," Mrs. Gunter continued. "I told him to tell Pelton on his last cargo for the Germans. He told me just before he sailed, the last time I saw him in February, that he would be mighty glad when they were safely out of the English Channel and away from the mines of the North Sea.

"That last goodby, in February—how little we thought then it would be forever." Her voice broke suddenly and she spoke as though she had forgotten she was alone.

"In my last letter from Alfred he said that although the Germans had been his friends on the last trip he did not fear them this time. The worst that could happen to him, he said, would be for them to seize his ship as contraband of war and emptying his cargo send him home. That he would be actually attacked never once entered my head."

"I remember the captain telling us just before he left of his terrible experience on the Oklahoma only fourteen months ago," Mrs. Jack Kruse, a friend of Mrs. Gunter's, who had called during the evening, suddenly interrupted. "Isn't it strange that the Oklahoma was wrecked early on a Saturday morning, only a little over a year ago. I shall never forget how thrilled I was as the captain told of his marvellous escape with only seven others of the crew.

"The captain was the last of the old guard," Mrs. Kruse continued. "He was the fine old type of seaman that one seldom sees nowadays. Erect and military in his bearing, with iron gray hair and a sturdy, fearless manner that always inspired confidence among his men, he was a

CLASH OVER PLATT LETTERS IN ROOSEVELT LIBEL TRIAL

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 3.—Resumption of the Barnes-Roosevelt libel suit this morning brought to the stand as the second witness of the day, Edward T. Platt, son and executor of the late Senator Platt, a Roosevelt witness who had brought him voluminous files of correspondence between the Senator and both parties in the action.

The examination of Mr. Platt, as well as that of Michael E. Dolan, general manager of the Albany Argus Company, who continued on the stand as the first witness of the day, was marked with a series of clashes.

It was said today that Governor Whitman will surely appear as a witness for Barnes, the Governor having declared his willingness to appear voluntarily since he cannot be summoned.

When court reconvened John M. Bowers took up his examination of Dolan going into detail in city printing in Albany under contracts let by the common council.

Dolan was a most reluctant witness and clashes were frequent, the witness many times appealing to the court with "Must I answer that?"

"You must answer," said Justice Andrews each time.

The witness also sought to qualify many of his answers and many of Mr. Bowers' motions to strike out were granted.

Referring to numerous books of the Argus company, which were in court, Bowers asked Dolan about bids made by his company to the Albany Common Council and Board of Education in 1899.

"What does $1.75 mean?" asked Bowers, referring to an Argus bid on an annual Board of Education report.

"That much a page," answered Dolan.

Dolan admitted the work cost him from 32 to 50 cents a page.

Bowers read from one of the Argus books an entry of 1,000 copies of the Albany Board of Education annual report of 158 pages and over "into the journal at $1.50 a page."

Dolan explained that his company paid the Albany Journal Company, a Barnes' concern, a commission for the contract. The Argus Company, he said, printed the biweekly reports of the board. The annual report was made up from the biweekly reports, the type of which Dolan saved. When the Journal, he said, got the contract for the annual report, the Argus Company, which had the type, paid the Journal a commission for the privilege of printing the report at $1.50 a page.

"And you charged just the same for printing from the old type for which you were originally paid $1.50?" demanded Bowers.

"Yes," said Dolan.

Justice Andrews here took a hand.

JUDGE IS PUZZLED.

"Let me see if I understand this" he said. Dolan repeated his explanation that his company paid the Journal company 15 per cent. on the board of education contract because the Argus company had most of the type set up. For this the Argus got $1.55 a page.

"I do not know any more now than I did before" said Justice Andrews and the jurors smiled assent.

Dolan finished his direct testimony shortly before noon and was not cross-examined, but Mr. Innis saved the privilege of recalling him.

Edward T. Platt, son of the late Thomas C. Platt, then was called. He produced Platt-Roosevelt and Roosevelt-Platt letters from 1898 to 1909. Platt also produced many letters between Platt and Barnes covering the same period.

Mr. Bowers asked for time to find the letters upon which he desired to examine the witness, and this led to a clash. Mr. Platt seeking to add a stipulation that none of the letters should be read in evidence until all had been read.

After an argument it was agreed that at recess Mr. Barnum for Barnes, Mr. Van Benschoten for Roosevelt and Mr. Platt should go through the letters.

Platt also brought a card index of his father's letter files. In answer to a question Platt said that certain correspondence of the late Senator had been destroyed.

every such assertion and disappeared, and when I have been unable to get to her my husband has done so. I just recently returned from a visit of two days, with my old home town, and there is absolutely no grounds for such a story.

"Where any such groundwork was laid for the report and I were both with me all the time we were there, I was away a short time to see a relative who lives there, and the whole world knows that I am the little girl that my folks and I went to Boston and stayed there for three years and I consider that everything possible would be done to find her if she were there.

"Where my husband had to return to New York to attend to his business affairs, he would send me letters and tell me to spend what time I cared to with her folks. She is a dear child and we all love her. She on the other of us was there with me during the time the almost constantly while my son did his studying.

GUARDED AGAINST FALSE HOPE.

"I would not for the moment entertain for my daughter-in-law that Coe's parents had not had her at all the times they had received us in her husband's absence, but I do not want to say anything which would give her false hope. She is a dear child and we all love her. She on the other of us was there with me during the time the almost constantly while my son did his studying.

"We have not held her at any time as we have received from the detectives and other sources. As soon as we received a copy of that letter hundreds of persons write letters that they had seen the girl in this city, there and everywhere, and this case has been an exception to the rule.

"All of these clews duly turned over to the detectives and in every one of them were run down, and all of them proved to be false. It is true that we did send her of the husband of her husband to Fairbanks, Alaska, because we wanted to be certain that it was really in before we left.

"The poor girl is none too strong, and the matter and I did not want to raise her hopes too high and then have them dashed if the report was not true.

"My daughter was told by the detectives that a man thought to be her husband had been found in Alaska. I have received a letter from her, part of which is very confidential, but I will let you read it."

YOUNG WIFE PATIENT.

The letter, written from Boston on April 27, read:

"My dear Mama:

"I cannot possibly tell you how happy I am ever hearing of the news that you have from Walter which was one of the most special delivery letters I do hope and pray it is a true one.

"Mother, I am perfectly willing to do anything you think best. Mr. Hunter and Mr. Gilmore say that they think they have found Harry in Alaska. I hope this is true. They look for a letter which is due in the papers, but they are not true. I have not failed to explain. Little Lucia is well and happy. Do let me know how the ring chew turns out. I feel very sad and upset, although it is very hard. With much love and affection, Helen."

Mrs. Coe stated that the sentence in the letter in which Mrs. Coe, Jr., expressed willingness to do anything her mother-in-law suggested was in reference to her moving from the home on Commonwealth avenue.

"We thought it was not well for her to live all alone in that house," said Mrs. Coe, "and suggested she come and live with us or move and live with her parents, in order that she would have company and to help about the."

Dr. Henry Clarke Coe, Jr., in response to a telegram of inquiry from the reported estrangement, wired:

"Story absolutely untrue." He said in the message that he had received direct word from his son.

WELLESLEY GIRL 'LOYALTY' VICTIM

Miss Edith D. Fanning of Worcester, a junior at Wellesley College, is reported to be seriously ill at her home in that city as a result of the nervous strain caused by the Wellesley College authorities' investigation of loyalty to her classmates in the opinion of her fellow-students. Miss Fanning's physician today ordered her removed to a hospital.

Miss Fanning, it is said, was charged not to testify before the investigating committee. She is well known in Worcester society, and during her freshman year at Wellesley was a member of the varsity crew and of the Class Athletic Committee. Efforts have been reported by Miss Fanning and her mother, Mrs. Louis M. Fanning, authorizing the college for no severe punishment to be visited on students.

Friends of the girl are urging her not to return to the college but she is determined to go back next fall. She was a member of the varsity crew and of the Class Athletic Committee, and was an honor student. She was to be graduated in 1916, but now it is feared that it will be impossible for her to get her diploma before 1917.

"I fully approve the rule requiring girls to be in the college halls unless excused by a physician," said Mrs. Fanning. "In fact it is a necessary rule for Wellesley to have. But my daughter did not break this rule. My only offence was failing in favor of her friends who had broken it and in not reporting them.

"In view of these circumstances I think suspension is a severe punishment. Both parents say that if their daughter prefers not to return she will have their full approval in that event."

PROTEST FILM BILL WEDNESDAY

Motion Picture Producers to Fight Censorship Plan at State House.

There will be another big outpouring of motion picture producers and theatre managers at the State House on Wednesday to oppose the Carstens bill which is to be given a hearing by the Senate Committee on Ways and Means.

The members of the Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will attend in a body and be represented by counsel. A representative of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange will be present, as will President John J. Barry, Vice-President Ignatius McNulty and Treasurer Harry Jennings of the Boston Central Labor Union. The latter will oppose the bill on behalf of organized labor.

The Carstens bill was offered by Carl C. Carstens, special agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The bill provides for the appointment of a paid State commission of three members, to be appointed by the State Board of Labor and Industries and to be under that board's jurisdiction.

Like the compromise bill reported by the Committee on Judiciary Friday, the Carstens bill would bestow a dangerous power to the three censors. It is bitterly objected to by the film producers and exhibitors.

OPPOSED TO BILL.

The exhibitors have waged a spirited campaign against the Carstens bill. They say Lieutenant-Governor Cushing, who is president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, is supporting the Carstens measure. Slides urging patrons to do their utmost to defeat the Carstens bill are being shown daily in every one of the 350 or more motion picture theatres in the State. These slides read:

KILL IT.
A Senate Bill Against the Motion Picture Industry by Needless State Censorship Should Be Killed.
The Workingman's Show Is in Danger.
It would Mean Higher Prices for Poorer Shows.
Do You Want This?
Sign the Slip Received at the Door.

The slips referred to by the slides contain coupons with blanks for the names and addresses of the petitioners. The Massachusetts Motion Picture Exhibitors' League claims it will present to the Senate when the bill comes up for final action before that body a petition bearing the names of more than a quarter million "movie" fans.

Vouchers read in part:

TO THE PUBLIC:

Do you want Bill Jones and Mary Jane Busy Body to tell you what moving pictures you can or cannot see? This is your fight. There has been favorably reported in the Senate a bill to establish a State Board of Censorship of motion pictures.

There is no demand or need for such a board. It can do nothing that is not already better done, except that it will provide a lot of fat jobs for politicians who know nothing of the art of the photo-play, and who cannot begin to serve you as you are already served by the National Board of Censors, who serve without pay, and not one of them has the slightest financial interest in the motion picture business.

LAUD NATIONAL BOARD.

The present National Board is composed of 132 prominent people — educators, writers, philanthropists, business men and women, public service officials, child welfare and settlement workers, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. officials—all men and women of the highest type, WHO GIVE THEIR SERVICES, THEIR TIME AND APPOINTMENT WITHOUT ANY REMUNERATION WHATSOEVER.

They have been doing this work ever since the first motion picture shows, and are doing well this and other work for the good they can accomplish.

The proposed censorship of the State board would be practically impossible to see and pass upon the prodigious annual output of 22,000 feet of film a year, and a decrease of one-fifth of the pictures would make increased admission prices for poorer pictures.

It would mean the throwing out of work of at least 1,000 union employes.

Its only defense is the creation of a commission to the Juvenile Court, might not to feel a grave interest in what shown to the public, especially, that such films could be responsible, and nothing to secure free residence or gross thoughtful."

BANKERS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A.—NO. 5
Benjamin Franklin—"Father of American Diplomacy"
AMERICA has never produced a greater statesman than Franklin, who was revered by the people second only to Washington. He was a signer of both the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States, and his wisdom made the latter a possibility. The great Lord Chatham pronounced him not only an honor to the Anglo-Saxon people, but to human nature. In every capitol of Europe he was a welcome guest, and he it was who induced France to lend us ships, men and money during the darkest days of the Revolution. Upon his death Congress ordered a general mourning of a month. In France it was decreed that all members of the national assembly should wear mourning for three days. So long as Americans treasure the Republic and Personal Liberty as the noblest of all human blessings, the fame of Franklin can never perish. Personally he was possessed of robust health, he was a well-shaped man, of a wise but merry nature, he had the head of a Greek philosopher, while his grace, his noble bearing and winning personality made him a conspicuous figure in any assemblage of great men. He was a moderate user all his lifetime of Old Madeira and barley-malt brews. It is safe to say that he toasted the New Republic with every great man of Europe and America. Franklin considered his work in building the Constitution his greatest service to posterity. Upon the self-evident declaration of the Constitution of the United States Anheuser-Busch 58 years ago launched their gigantic institution. To-day, wherever Americans go for health, or business, or pleasure, their famed brand BUDWEISER is there. Its popularity, due to its quality, purity, mildness and exquisite flavor, has daily grown in public favor until 7500 people are constantly employed to keep pace with the ever-increasing demand. SUNDAY MAKES A "TRAIL" RECORD

By International News Service.

PATERSON, N. J., May 3.—Billy Sunday is the David Belasco of the evangelistic platform. Using a dramatic effect that would have done credit to a first class stage manager in New York he induced practically every one of the 25,000 men who heard him on Sunday, as they would vote for prohibition at the next election. A little later $12 of these men came forward to shake hands with him. It was his best day here.

"For Christ, for your wife and children, for your home, for country," was his call.

There seems little question that Sunday's last, celebrated, sermon, on "Home" produced a deep impression. Not a one could be carefully arranged for the strong finish that followed the one in the "trail" to their feet. They were carried away, swept up from the benches.

He turned to some small boys in knickerbockers, planted inconspicuously behind the platform and said:

"Come up here, kids," he said, with his characteristic grin. They filed up on the red carpet and stood like a bird. Sunday, fifteen, nice looking outstanding boys. The revivalist caught up a big American flag. He hammed his chair behind his pulpit, kept one foot in the chair seat and stamped the other one on the pulpit.

"I stand between these boys and the breweries. I stand between them and drunkards' graves," he yelled and wildly waved the flag, whose true meaning he recognized as well as George M. Cohen ever did.

"I would not give one boy for all the distilleries and saloons this side of hell. These boys are the raw material of your country," he shouted.

He had his audience just right. One man in the front row stopped his eyes. Two in the second row were weeping. Sunday's finger is always on the pulse. He felt the heart-beating was high.

"How many of you will say, 'I will vote for prohibition if I get a chance at the next election?' he called. "How many of you? Stand up, men."

He lifted up his hands and seemed to pull the whole audience out of their seats.

"Trail hitters for the day totaled 1,246 new record.

Bird Declines Foss Bid to Run for Governorship

Charles Sumner Bird declines the invitation of former Governor Eugene N. Foss to be a candidate for the Republican nomination as Governor on a Prohibition platform in a letter to Mr. Foss is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Foss—I am in receipt of your letter, but can only say to be running a Progressive-Republican candidate for Governor in the next primary election.

"Your suggestion, and to others of the same nature that I have received during the past few months, is by no means overlooked by me, and I have decided that I shall not be a candidate.

"There are many personal reasons why I should not, which I would gladly disregard if there were some very strong public duty calling me, and I do not see that there exists any such duty. Whenever such a duty exists I shall be the first to do my share in the fight.

"Yours very truly,

"CHARLES S. BIRD."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weaker when markets opened and grew more active as prices declined. The sinking of an American vessel by a German submarine and reports that the Washington government is aroused over the occurrence were noteworthy influences. They induced a great deal of selling. This raised serious doubts as to the future of the country's foreign trade will be affected if American products cannot be transported abroad.

Issues which have been recently boosted by "war orders" were affected. Westinghouse declining more than 3 points, Bethlehem Steel 4, and Baldwin Locomotives 2 points. Coppers were active. Canadian Pacific, which showed remarkable strength, declined to depths of 165, a net loss of more than 3 points. Within a half an hour, however, it had rallied from the lowest level and was not only recovered but showed a net gain of a point.

Among early declines in New York were Amalgamated Copper, American Can 1¾, American Smelting 1, Atchison 1, Canadian Pacific 2, Chesapeake & Ohio 1, Colorado Fuel 1, Delaware & Hudson 1, General Electric 1, Great Northern pfd. 1, Interborough 1¼, Kansas City Southern 1¼, Missouri Pacific 1¼, Pressed Steel Car 3¼, Steel Foundries 2¼ and Southern Pacific 1. Steel declined a point near the end of the first hour, after showing ⅝ that rallied to close ⅜ down.

Commodities were in demand, specialties including sugar, tobacco, Reading, Utah Copper, Anaconda and Butte & Superior. Sugar was off 2¾, Tobacco 2, Reading 1, Utah Copper 1¼, Anaconda 1, Butte & Superior 1¼, Pressed Steel Car 3¼, Steel Foundries 2¼ and Southern Pacific 1. Steel declined a point near the end of the first hour, after showing ⅝ that rallied to close ⅜ down.

LONDON COPPER PRICES.

Copper prices were lower in London today over futures and electrolytic being easy off £3 to £60 10s and £61 10s. But spelter advanced £2. Little has been said of late as to the demand for copper metal and the extent of recent selling is unknown. But the big producers are asking 18 cents a pound for electrolytic.

An increase in the business of a small order house is a good trade barometer, and a report of such a case while not indicating quite accurately whether the average person is buying more or less goods, is always showing that the trade would be better or worse in the direction prophesied may be found in the April report of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Its sales for that month amounted to $9,243,001, an increase of $630,931, or 7.32 per cent. For the first four months of this year its sales increased $2,691,378, or 7.6 per cent.

BRITAIN'S FOREIGN TRADE.

As to the condition of trade in the United Kingdom, the London Country and Westminster Bank, Ltd., one of the largest of the joint stock banks, in its monthly review says:

"The value of the imports into the United Kingdom during the month of March is of more than moderate dimensions, and Germany has promulgated more extraordinary measures in connection with the interference of merchantmen on the part of British naval vessels, but as yet there has been little evidence that the commerce of the country is suffering to any considerable extent. Several vessels have been sunk, but the percentage is most insignificant, and the disturbance induced by the new policy that have been launched or placed on

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

J. P. Morgan sailed from Liverpool for New York yesterday on the steamship St. Louis.

A Berne A. Superior official bulletin intimated that Switzerland's commercial relations with Germany would be severely restricted after the present quarterly term, which ends June 30, owing to the war.

For the week, The New York Evening Post estimates the total of bank clearings at $3,000,000,000, a gain of 20 per cent as compared with a week ago, and 15 per cent as compared with the corresponding week one year ago. The actual increase for nine months was $2,000,000,000, compared with a decrease of $2,000,000,000 for the same previous year period.

CHARLE WILLIAMS plays the romantic part of Tommy Steele. His fine character and chivalrous bearing in the company of the heavenly Celestia, gives Williams the opportunity of his career, and you may be well assured that not an opportunity has been missed.

ANITA STEWART—the "Goddess." In the flowing draperies that are most proper in "Heaven" and so bewildering to moderns, she is in very spirit the embodiment of spring-time, youth, innocence and a modest, beauteous violet.

RALPH INCE, director, who has put his best efforts into what he declares is an unsurpassable picture drama. Mr. Ince has scorned to stoop to cheap theatrical devices, and the results as seen in the theatres will make a new epoch in picture-making.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, the author, gives the favorite reading for millions of subscribers to Hearst's Magazine, Cosmopolitan Magazine, etc. One of the most notable figures in American literature, Mr. Morris has forgotten commercialism and permitted his art full swing.

RUDOLPH WILL FACE DODGERS

BROOKLYN, May 2.—The Braves and Dodgers renew their fight on the baseball diamond this afternoon, with Rudolph probably opposing Aitchison. The Braves are now going at full steam, and Manager Stallings predicted this morning that his team will be very close to the top in another week or so.

It took the Braves more than a week to get started but the week of rain-outs seemed to have a very beneficial effect on the team, especially John Mclnnis, and the World's Champions are again playing the kind of ball that won.

The batting of the Braves in the last four games is a pleasing feature. Mclnnis, Gowdy and Connolly have been driving out long hits with many ball games. Moran, Evers, Whitted and Schmidt are also getting into their hammering the ball to all corners of the lot, and Hank Gowdy is showing that he can connect with the ball as well as ever. Rudolph is not batting as he should.

Manager Stallings has five pitchers that he can depend on going the full nine ball innings. Dick Rudolph, Tom Hughes, Pete Perdue, Lefty Tyler and Al Nehf are all working in fine shape, but Tyler and Nehf have taken on a world of work. Manager Stallings has not used Otis Crandall in a league game. Yesterday Crandall pitched several innings against the Phillies and looked good. He has not been feeding the ball to batters as he did in the past, but he has been using a fine curve ball and showed all of his old-time form.

RUDOLPH IN FINE FORM.

Rudolph was the first pitcher to get into stride and he has pitched some great ball games this season. Dick Rudolph has earned the right to take a rest after his pitching and the work of Tom Hughes in relieving him on some of its home games. James and Tyler are now in fine pitching shape, but Tyler both are ready to step to the mound and pitch good ball.

Tyler is already slated as coming back to the Braves next year. He has cleaned up a league batting championship and walked off. This is the past week he has been feeding the ball to batters even in batting practice and showed all of his old-time form.

JAMES IS RIGHT.

James got started but one league game, pitching the New York Giants into submission, James pitched cool, heady ball and was hit rather freely. But he showed enough stuff, control and speed and he is now ready to continue the good work which helped greatly in making the pennant last season.

The opposing teams fear the Braves and would rather play any other team in the league. They fear the big game hitting. Dode Schmidt and Smith, and while these latters come in for a lot of kidding from the fans on the part of the opposing battery to fool them, Magee was rather slow in reaching batting form, but he is now hitting the ball out in the style which made him one of the leading batters of the National League during the past few years. Schmidt and Smith have little brother-ball, and what one does the other does. Their net takings are of singles, doubles, triples and home runs.

STALLINGS IS PLEASED.

Manager Stallings is well pleased with the work of the Braves so far. "The Braves are just starting," said Manager Stallings this morning. "With my pitchers all in shape and the way my boys are batting, they are a tough bunch to defeat. James is right and the next time he starts he will go through the nine innings and pitch good ball. Tyler has come around, slowly but surely, and he will be a valuable man.

"We have all kinds of dangerous hitters. Magee has started to bat and he will continue to pace he set last week. It will not be long before Boston fans will realize why I traded Whitted and Dugy for Magee."

Reich and Coffey End Hard Training

NEW YORK, April 3.—Jim Coffey and Al Reich wound up heavy training for their match Wednesday night at the Garden. Coffey entertained over 500 fans at the Polo club, boxing twelve rounds with Joe Jeannette, Jack Connors and Mike McTigue.

Reich parked them in at Dal Hickman's and battled three rounds each with Harry Wills, Colin Bell and Dave Mills.

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

He's a devil at first plate, that's all, there is to it, this Eugene Paulette, nine and other diamond performers propose to the league to pitch to. It back to be over or beg, get going to pitch, and annually he draws fore than the others from the field. Hug probably leads the field to the head-head route.

Hug is off to a running start, wearing pretty thin spots, and up to and Thursday he has a record of nineteen walks in three ball games, so no re-ported to Brooklyn and made the jump from there.

* * *

Manager Breadabeth of the Cubs is far from satisfied with his pitching staff. When a team gets out twelve runs, as the Cubs did recently, and then loses there is nothing to blame but pitching. It's been the same day in and day out. Even when the team won it was not due to the good pitching. There is no one on the pitching staff at present, Jimmy is unable to render his services to the club. Larry Cheney looks the same as he did last year, and Bert Humphries is not feeling well.

Clarence Rowland, manager of the White Sox, has the following remarks to make on baseball:

Never take money from a ball player.

The greatest player today is Eddie Collins.

The player is as important as the manager.

The only player I ever fined was Vic Cantrell.

I never fine a ball player, but show him his wrong.

The closing hour for my players is 11.30 o'clock.

Pull ev together; don't spread yourself if you want to win.

Give the kids a chance, and don't rely too much on the broken down stars.

I love a batter and an aggressive player, but I never tolerate roughness.

There's not much difference in managing a major league club and a minor league club.

I never predict a pennant. Pennants are won on the ball field and not through the press.

National Leaguers Cannot Cut Games

NEW YORK, May 2.—A check on the calling of games to allow teams to catch trains rather than necessary to set them to their next scheduled date, one hour before game time has been put into effect by the National League. It is also ruled that games may not be started earlier than the usual hour. The announcement was made in a statement by Secretary John A. Heydler, which reads:

"Hereafter no club in the National League will be permitted to begin a championship game prior to the usual starting hour in its operating city. Before game is started in order that the participating club or clubs may catch early trains. The first train" is started in the league's laws will be construed to mean the last train scheduled to reach the next city at least one hour prior to the game. Time of starting games"

How to Keep Well by Exercise

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

Beginning a series of daily articles in explanation and amplification of the discussion published in the Boston Sunday AMERICAN yesterday between Julian Hawthorne and Dr. E. H. Nichols, associate professor at Harvard and physical director in charge of the students. The second article of this series will appear in tomorrow's Boston AMERICAN.

The subjugation of the earth—a flattering euphemism by which we mean our designed scratching of its outermost rind—is accomplished by moving things.

The subjugation of our physical selves is acquired by intelligent and purposeful moving of our bodies. But the majority of men journey from childhood to the grave without ever moving their bodies in any way calculated to benefit them. It doesn't occur to them to do it, and they don't know how.

Exercise is spontaneous in a boy. His surprise at things in general, his curiosity about them, his enjoyment of his untried sensations, keep him in continual motion and effort, from getting up to going to bed.

The world is his gymnasium: leave him to his own devices in the open air of the country, and he becomes an athlete and a naturalist; he runs, swings, lifts, pushes, climbs, jumps, swims, strikes, throws, dances; at the end of the day every muscle in his body has been put through its paces, he unconsciously of anything but the fun of it.

That is what the boy's soul does toward the making of the boy's body. His Creator made him a bundle of potentialities, and put into him the divine spark of impulse to carry those potentialities into action.

We talk about educating boys. Boys can educate us, if we will let them.

Let us put on the film a twelve-hour picture of a ten-year-old boy, and study that. Ten thousand physical instructors have devised as many systems of exercise, with photographs and diagrams; the uninstructed boy does them all, and betters the instructor. The reason of his superiority is, that he does not know he is doing them; they are wholly subordinate to the end he has in view, which is never physical development, but always a good time.

MUST LEARN TO FORGET ONE'S SELF.

There is education in that for grown-up people; only, as with all the best things, they are unable to profit by the teaching.

More than the simple phenomena of nature is needed to make grown men forget themselves, especially when exercise is in question.

Men charging the enemies' trenches in Flanders forget themselves; but the stimulus is too strong for daily use.

No one except a boy ever has been a boy, or can be one. We are fain to concede his incomparableness, and do our best with what we are.

We can make a Germanoid imitation of his movements, and call it gymnastics or athletics, and for his spontaneous joy we can substitute several things: ambition to be strong, resolve to be healthy, competition, money. None of these motives is intrinsically unworthy, though compared with joy they are poor makeshifts. Those only can do supremely well who are unconscious of the doing. The act that is not swallowed up out of sight in the aim is always imperfect.

After boyhood, young men who are athletically disposed commonly spur themselves either by competitions, or by the acquired knowledge that exercise makes them feel well, and gives them superiority over their fellows.

Relatively few take exercise for the sake of the simple enjoyment of it; they will run to keep up their wind, for example, or toss the weight to strengthen their shoulders, or wrestle for general development: not because these stretchings and contractions of the muscles give them pleasure. They will strain themselves to the breaking point, beyond it sometimes, in the effort to defeat a rival; these are ambitions of youth, and have their wise function in life.

But now comes middle age and after. What can be done for them by way of finding a substitute for that lost joy of childhood?

TWO KINDS OF MIDDLE-AGED MEN.

Of middle-aged and of elderly men we meet two kinds.

One kind has exercised in youth and then given it over for the occupations of business, or out of mere indolence.

The other kind has never taken any regular exercise at all.

Of the two, I incline to think that the outlook for the latter is often better than for the former.

The reason is that muscles which have once been well developed and have then deteriorated are more difficult to revive and render efficient than are muscles which have lain fallow—so to speak—from the first.

Of course, if the man who has never exercised has also abused himself by overeating and drinking and other indulgencies, he will find special difficulties to overcome. But a muscular system once powerful, now fallen into neglect: heart, lungs and liver once active and vigorous as a result of regular muscular exercise, now congested, fattened or enfeebled and atrophied: it is hard to bring them back to anything like health and ability.

Besides, men formerly athletic are prone, on becoming idle, to get fat outside, and inside, too, which is worse. The fuel of their active days continues to accumulate, but the fires that burned it up have died down.

NO CASE IS IMPOSSIBLE.

It has been my belief, however, that in almost no case is improvement impossible through exercise; though no doubt the kind and degree of exercise will vary almost as there are varieties of the personal equation.

We are not talking of making athletes of old men, but of enabling men of forty, fifty, sixty, or seventy, to become as "good," as the phrase is, and to get as much pleasure out of the routine of existence, as can men ten, twenty or thirty years their juniors, whose physical development is neglected. And I believe the obstacles to this are ordinarily not so much material as mental: that they are chiefly incredulity and indolence: the vis inertiae excessive, and the vis a tergo insufficient.

In the ensuing series of articles we will consider how these obstacles may be overcome.

KAUFF REFUSES TO REJOIN FEDS

NEW YORK, May 2.—President Hempstead of the Giants and Robert B. Ward, owner of the Brooklyns, having buried the hatchet, Benny Kauff, the star batsman of the Federal League, over whom the leagues have been in dispute the past few days, now is on the warpath and threatens trouble for all the magnates.

Kauff asserts that the National Commission, which ruled that he shall not play in organized baseball, has not the power to prevent him from earning a living by playing baseball, and that he will not rejoin the Brooklyns, as he is not under contract to that club.

Kauff claims that he will hold the New York club to their contract that calls for a salary, whether he plays with the Giants or not.

"The National Commission, the Feds nor the Giants can't prevent me from earning at least $5,000 a month for the next three seasons," declared Kauff. "The contract that I signed with the Giants is one that will stand the acid test, and I will hold the club strictly to it."

President Gilmore suspended Kauff indefinitely, and this, of course, means that the player will not draw any salary from the Brooklyns during his suspension. Gilmore refuses to intimate how long he intends to keep the player idle, but it is safe that the league chief intends to deal severely with him.

CHARLEY WHITE HERE FOR BIG GO WITH MURPHY AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

CHARLEY WHITE, Chicago's famous lightweight, is in our midst today. He is accompanied by Nate Lewis, his manager. The Windy City ring sensation completed his training here today for his twelve-round bout with Eddie Murphy of South Boston which will be staged before the Allen A. A. tomorrow night.

Both Manager White and Murphy have created a tremendous amount of interest among lovers of the fistic sport and a big crowd is expected to turn out to witness the contest between featherweights.

WHITE is the last word in clever boxing. He is clever for an exponent of the ring game, and is a wonder with a deadly punch. White is proud of his record. He has proved himself to be the best boxer and hardest hitter in the world. He recently defeated Johnny Dundee of Philadelphia, who was being boomed for a match with Freddy Welsh and his backers believed that he could do the trick as well as the Welshman. Dundee, however, started out to box White in the opening rounds and seemed to have a knockout blow after a couple of rounds of fighting.

NATE LEWIS, White's manager, believes that the outcome of the greatest lightweight in America and the leading opponent for Freddy Welsh in a bout over the twenty-round route, to discussing the matter today he said:

"I cannot see any merit to Dundee's claim as lightweight champion of America. Charley defeated Dundee in Milwaukee last May in as clear a fight as one could wish for. Dundee is also a popular idea in Philadelphia, but the American lightweight limit of 133 pounds is not beneficial to him. He can make this weight, but it is a task for him to do so. Dundee is a clever boxer and a hard hitter, but he is not in the same class with Charley White. Charley has a good line on Murphy, and I am ready to match White for a bout with the Californian.

"I AM of the opinion that White would be able to dispose of Freddy Welsh in a twenty-round bout. Welsh is a clever boxer, but he would not be able to stop White at bay over the long route. The Englishman is clever, but he would not be able to stop White's rushes at long range. White has a good deal more ring generalship than Welsh, and consequently would outpoint himself carefully for the Welshman. White has a good line on Murphy's ability, as he saw him perform in and around Chicago."

JIM McCARTHY, manager of Murphy, is confident that the South Boston youth will prove to a winner when he steps through the ropes tomorrow night. Murphy is a fighting lightweight who is 134 pounds and can box. "He has not even begun to show his best form," said Jim today. "He has not even needed his best trouble in taking care of his opponents so far. He has adopted a new training method with which he is pleased with, but as I said before, he has not even begun to show his best as it were. When making weight he has been a fighting fool, and has gone without water for a week at a time. This was not necessary but he was pretty satisfied

THE GODDESS — The Serial Beautiful — BY GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES GODDARD

A Marvellous Story by Two Famous Authors, Presented by the Hearst Newspapers in Collaboration with the Renowned Vitagraph Players

Miss Anita Stewart as "The Goddess" Mr. Earle Williams--Tommy Barclay

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles Goddard

(Copyright, 1916, by Star Company.)

DEAR Barclay:

Every individual voter feels that he could run the nation better than those appointed to do so by himself and thousands of others just like him. One voter would put the earth higher than it ever was before; the next would abolish it. But, whichever type of thinker puts his candidates into power, there remain always in these United States millions of people who have to be poor, dirty and discontented.

From this even a child would conclude either that a vast majority of people are doomed to unhappiness by the God who made them or that a vast majority of politicians are incapable governors. As to the first conclusion we know nothing; but as to the second, we are certain beyond peradventure.

With mighty few exceptions, those whom we put over us to govern us are the most incompetent lot of legislators and administrators in history. For the most part they are men variously trained to the law. They talk better and oftener on a greater variety of topics than the average man who is making or trying to make an honest living. They make it their business to be conspicuous instead of the opposite and so they get themselves elected.

As a body of men, they know practically nothing about anything useful or important. Their minds are so cramped with the futile law their memories have to carry that there is no room left in the heart of love which is justice. If lawyers could be trained to do what is right the pawnbroker down the street and the shoemaker around the corner would soon be able to get rich from affairs important to them, to all on furies and to justice.

But the good reader will whisper: What in each voter's judgment is the chief thing that is wrong with the United States? There would be almost as many answers as there are voters. I've asked lots of people, no two agreed, out I liked one man's answer a lot. He said: The chief trouble with the nation is that its citizens have to pay taxes when they ought to be receiving dividends.

WE HAVE BEEN GREEDY, EVEN AS A NATION

"And this," he said, "would be the case if from the start we had been governed by our best minds instead of by our worst. If as a nation we had been run from the beginning the way Standard Oil, for instance, has been run in trust."

I am not standing up for the rapaciousness of trusts, only for their efficiency. As a nation we have been more rapacious and dishonest than any trust that ever lived. This being so, and a blot upon us that can never be wiped out, a wrong of our own doing that can never be righted, it is ten thousand pities that we haven't been efficient, too.

How many billions of dollars and how fruitful wealth, as land, coal, oil, forest, gold, silver, farm, city, and city improvements think in big enough figures to answer that. Anyhow, as a nation we grabbed, stole and cheated it all away from the original owners of it. And then we began to play ducks and drakes with it.

If from the start our resources could have been handled by a Rockefeller he would be unable to buy a thousand times richer than he is, but we —we would none of us be poor. And our house would be clean and ornament from cellar to collar, and not gutted and creaky and full of vermin and half the ceilings down.

Think of a whole country run as a trust, with employment at more than a fair return for every able-bodied man, and fat dividends for everybody in good years! In such a state by force of public opinion even a Bryan might be made useful. Even in Utopia there are offices which have to be swept out.

If there is salvation ahead of us, instead of ruin, something of this sort will have to be worked out from what is left to us of our natural resources.

Failing this those of us who are rich enough and contented enough as individuals will be rolled down from our high places and trampled by an unreasoning mob until there is no longer anything stable nor any one contented. The air of this great city which we breathe is 10 per cent. air and 90 per cent. revolution. In other parts of the country the percentage of revolution is greater.

The only man with sufficient mind and power to effect anything good is yourself. But if you personally were to preach the gospel of dictatory, people would think you were working to put it bluntly, for your own pocket. This gospel then ostensibly must not come from you. It must not come from the rich. From whom then, from the poor, you answer. But alas, no friend, even the champions of the poor are open to suspicion.

This gospel then must come from where. Why, from Heaven, of course, whence all good gospels have come, or are generally believed to have come. And, seeing that we are in America, where the women are given the best of everything, our heaven-sent messenger must be a woman.

I see your gesture of horror. But she shall not be as you see her. She shall be young and beautiful and good and sincere. She shall not speak her own thoughts, but only the things we will believe in her. The classes may, and if they don't they will have sense enough to pretend to.

With you to help, I believe, upon my word of honor, that I can make this thing happen. Will you help? What do you think?

Yours as ever,

MILES STILLITER.

Tothis letter Professor Stilliter received the following answer by return messenger:

Dear Stilliter:

I'll help if you can answer one thing satisfactorily. To be successful it shouldn't be anonymous. It must be sincere. She must believe what she preaches. It may be unsure, how can she tell people that she comes from heaven? You and she must come from there in order to believe. It is quite a romance. I know that you have been thinking and experimenting for years toward some such end as this. But I am a business man, and I want to be shown.

Yours, with sincere interest, B.

To this Professor Stilliter answered:

Dear Barclay:

How can you believe that she comes from heaven. It she can be made to believe that, are you satisfied? S.

That night the two men met by appointment. Outlining his plan, and occasionally going into detail, Professor Stilliter talked rapidly for almost two hours without stopping, till the sweat stood on his brow and his voice began to fail him. He finished with these words. "And for a few of us, as a mere side issue, there's billions in it."

Gordon Barclay remained for a long time in profound thought.

"There is, as you say," he said at last, "billions in it. Yet if I was sure that we could make it happen, really make everybody contented and not poor, I'd be content to give up everything I have already, and I could die happy."

"So would I," exclaimed Stilliter, hurriedly. "But I'd rather make the world happier and myself with it. Wouldn't you?"

Barclay shook his heavy shoulders, lifted his leonesque head and smiled.

"Of course," he said. "I was dreaming. I believe the thing can be done. And without any sacrifice whatever, either spiritual or material."

"It will take a long time."

"I understand that. You have to teach almost from the beginning."

"I don't teach her exactly. I make her believe."

"Have you a child in view?"

"Now that you're with me, I shall soon find one."

"What are the chances against us?"

"Only these: That before we bring her to earth to preach our gospel you are dead, or I am, or the revolution has already come, and born a different and better fruit for us all."

Professor Miles Stilliter was never idle, except when he was asleep. On a certain morning in the Spring of 1909 Professor Stilliter, having mislaid his glasses, was unable to tell what time it was, though he held his watch as near to his eye-ball as he could without touching it. It was, however, his usual time for beginning the day, for at that moment, his valet brought in the morning papers. Professor Stilliter did not read the papers word for word, but column by column. It was astonishing to see so much intelligence and energy and adroitness in a young man who resembled nothing so much as a mop-stick.

The following headline in the New York American almost immediately caught his eye, and put an end to any further search for news:

"TRAGIC END OF A EUGENIC ROMANCE.

"Brilliant John Amesbury, who married one of America's greatest beauties, killed by a trolley car. Widow prostrated by news, not expected to recover."

A cut of a beautiful young man and a beautiful young woman lent to this unusual item of news a tinge of real tragedy.

Professor Stilliter was out of bed in a twinkling of an eye. He bathed and dressed with miraculous speed. He took a little of the way in a taxi, a little of the way in a fire-engine horse is harnessed.

Swift as were all his motions, he dwelled somewhat upon his breakfast. A close observer might have noticed that he chewed every mouthful exactly the same number of times.

TOMMY BARCLAY ON THE SCENE.

The late John Amesbury's house was at Scarsdale. On the morning in which this narrative opens a number of village boys were pulling off a dog fight in the quiet country road that bordered the narrow front lawn. Tommy Barclay, aged twelve, hearing this racket from afar and full of the tragedy which had overtaken the kind and friendly people in the big house, came up on a dead run.

His efforts to interfere with the sport and to secure peace and quiet for the sick woman in the house were not met with approval, and, indeed, for a moment it looked as if the noise of the dog fight was going to be swelled by the noise of a boy fight, a dozen to one.

Fortunately for Tommy, the door of the house opened, and a trained nurse, with a long face like a horse and a domineering eye, came running down the front walk with an expression so ominous and formidable that without a word spoken, the dogs were dragged apart and the boys made off at high speed. Something in Tommy's face attracted the nurse's attention. She was far kinder than she looked.

"Do you want anything?" she said. "The papers are dull," said Tommy. "That Mrs. Amesbury wouldn't get well." He said no more, but his whole attitude and expression was a polgnant question. The nurse laid her hand suddenly on his brown head, patted it clumsily, shook her own head just the veriest little and hurried back to the house.

A shadow fell upon Tommy, and he found himself looking into the immense thick-rimmed glasses of Professor Stilliter. Intuitively the boy and the man disliked each other. Professor Stilliter would have rather asked almost any other small boy if that was Mrs. Amesbury house. Tommy would have preferred to tell almost any other man that it was.

Professor Stilliter, his question answered, moved energetically upon the house, and from the mild, who answered the bell inquired for the latest bulletin of Mrs. Amesbury. He stepped forward as if to enter the house, and the servant made the least show in the world of shutting the door in his face. Professor Stilliter turned reluctantly away and heard the closing of the door.

At that moment a buggy driven furiously stopped at the front gate, and, thanks to his glasses, which gave him helpless eyes an almost hawk-like vision, Professor Stilliter recognized Dr. Wainwright, an old acquaintance, if not a friend.

"Glad to see you," said Professor Stilliter. "Are you in charge here?"

"Yes," said Dr. Wainwright.

"Then you can help me, and nobody else can. I never knew Amesbury. I don't know his wife, but as a eugenist I was immensely interested in their marriage, and I have a deep scientific interest in seeing the daughter. Now at such a time as this I could not very well force myself upon the household, but if you could slip me in with you as a consulting physician I will be immensely obliged to you, and there will be no talk of splitting fees."

STILLITER FINDS THE OBJECT OF HIS SEARCH.

Dr. Wainwright smiled and nodded. The object of Professor Stilliter's interest was not hard to find. She was seated, forlorn and disconsolate, upon the bottom step of the front stair. Dr. Wainwright picked her up in his arms and kissed her. He made her shake hands with Professor Stilliter. He told her that Professor Stilliter was very fond of little girls, and wouldn't she do her best to entertain him while he himself was with her mother upstairs?"

Professor Stilliter could not conceal the fact that the child's appearance delighted him, and that his appearance did not furnish her with the same delight affected him no more than a duck's back is affected by water. She had been too well brought up and carried her three or four years with too much dignity to run from him and hide, as her instincts prompted her.

She did not resist when he lifted her from the floor, asked her age and said, "My! how heavy she was!" She winced a little and flinched a little when he prodded her arm and chest and felt with evident admiration the firm and chubby calves of her legs, and when he made her open her mouth and looked in and murmured, "Colossal!" But when he asked wouldn't she show him the pretty house in which she lived, she did so gladly for it seemed to put an end to being handled.

For his immediate purpose Professor Stilliter did not need to penetrate beyond the cheerful living room, for here his eye was caught at once by many three photographs, in which Professor Stilliter, who never forgot not only to his small companion, but to her famous father and her mother, said: "What have they been doing on the piano?" asked Professor Stilliter. The little girl looked in the direction indicated, and told him that it was a Chinese "ondelant."

During the moment in which he had succeeded in diverting her attention the young man had whipped out the three photographs in their folded leather frames into one of his capacious pockets. His mission in the house finished, he asked her if she would give him a kiss. This was a thing which, it seemed to her, she could neither accord nor refuse. She simply bore him with her eyes. Professor shrugged his great shoulders, grunted like a pig and abruptly took his departure.

Still weeping, the little girl found her way to a piazza that opened off the living room. Here she seated herself on a very small chair that was by no means adapted to crying until she had almost forgotten what she was crying about.

Tommy Barclay still lingering about the premises, traced the infantile wails to their sources. The sight of his grandfather's face above Mrs. Amesbury's ruffles, across which he had thrown her, started tears again, for he was her best friend in the world, and she wished to tell him all about the wicked man with the black-rimmed spectacles. Tommy took her on his knees and listened and gave comfort. Presently he took from his pocket a little rag doll, and very shyly, for now that he looked at it again it seemed a poor gift, he offered it to her.

To be continued tomorrow.

ZOE — Crawley Continues to Keep Brooke Away From the Picture Gallery

(Copyright, American Newspapers, Ltd. By special right to C. A. Sell by International News Service.)

(By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.)

THE Warrens' landaulette purred away in the direction of the Leveredge Gallery, and Crawley breathed a prayer that Leverede had been as good as his word and had closed the establishment.

Hardly had he left the Warrens, however, when the blundering footsteps into the United arms of Mr and Mrs. Brooke.

The inevitable had happened. His heart stood still. In a confused blur he received a well-defined impression of Zoe's rather wild eyes and Brooke's tanned, grimly lovial face.

"What luck!" exclaimed Brooke. "Come along." He linked his arm in Crawley's. The artist tried to read what Zoe was trying to tell him with her wonderful eyes, but before she or Mrs. Brooke could get any look a chance. He dodged Crawley to the left and carried on a rapid fire of talk.

"Come along, my boy," he said. "You're going to be promoted to be quite one of the family and show the way"—what do you call her?—"Zoe, eh? The Zoe we've been talking about, aren't you Zoe? Excellent idea. Zoe, Crawley, Zoe and Crawley, Crawley, Zoe, and so we can have half an hour together."

Crawley had invented such a complication clairvoyantly he had lived through this very scene as he expected. Subconsciously he had prepared himself for such an emergency, but he had not reckoned on the well-nigh overwhelming sense of relief which surged through his being at the sudden realization that, up to this moment, Godfrey Brooke knew nothing.

It meant hope. It meant everything. It meant wanted just then—time, breathing space. The reaction interjected him with hilarious joy. He became in an instant a new man, instinct with hope and life and energy.

He glanced furtively at Mrs. Brooke. She had drawn her veil closely, a white, almost opaque, veil, which effectually hid her face, and the artist could see the glorious eyes gleaming with excitement and fear like live coals; could see the red lips parted in acute agony.

Could he depend upon her? It only he were certain.

But just now a thoughtless daring had come to him, a desperate nonchalance. It was the sudden revulsion of feeling in true artistic with relief. Brooke did not know. So far all was well.

"Look here, Brooke," he said, and his voice had a ring of confidence and self-assurance which it had never had before during this terrible time, "you don't want to go and see that foolish picture. You'll have plenty of chances, and besides"—Crawley frowned as though with a sudden idea—"I've got a scheme which would drop it," he added, beneath his breath, but not so low that Mrs. Brooke did not catch the sound of it.

They puzzled her considerably, for they suggested some thing which was quite unexpected to her, and that was that there was some understanding between her husband and Crawley. She also realized the danger and remembered her promise to Crawley. He should not find her out.

She made a valiant effort to change the topic of conversation, and to her secret marvelled at her wonderful and incomprehensible power of self-control and her consummate acting. The woman seemed almost supernatural.

She burst out into an excited conversation as a dozen subjects. Crawley had been a very disagreeable man not to have come with them to the Savoy, she told him, in playful reproof—a very mean man, and a great fraud, since there was nothing in particular but promenading Bond street. She laughingly joked with her husband on his appetite, and told Crawley what they had had for lunch and whom they had seen at the Savoy, also the music the band had played.

She described minutely and vivaciously the dress of a world-famed French actress who had lunched there with the Grand Duke Basil or Hesse-Hofburg and Mr. Tony Cohen, she expatiated volubly, laughing the while, and apparently in the highest spirits, on the stories of wild and attractive and deadly peril with which the benighted traveller, her husband, had entertained her—elephant stories, rhinoceros stories, snake stories, for Godfrey Brooke had the most thrilling experiences to recount.

The woman talked incessantly; she did not give Brooke or Crawley a chance to put in so much as a monosyllable. Crawley saw her game at once. She was talking for the sake of talking, to fill up time, and he quickly fell in with her plan.

Brooke listened, smiling happily from time to time every now and then he glanced at his wife with a proud look of protection, as if he said: "There, Crawley, what will I not do for her? she a pearl among women! What little dinner soon, for it's to be a very small affair, you know. I have a deal some new clothes now."

John looked grave. "I don't understand," he mused. "How it happens that our daily expenses are so much more than they were a year ago."

"Because we have a better cook," Jessie explained. "She makes good things, and good things take butter, eggs, sugar, and so forth."

"Tell her to go elsewhere," he counseled.

"I don't like to find fault with her," his wife demurred. "She does as well as she knows how, and I don't want to make her dissatisfied—she is so competent."

She had already reached the point where she was dependent upon a competent maid. So speedily does each one of us become accustomed to what we once regarded as luxuries!

A COMPETENT MAID SEEMED NECESSARY

"Well," said John, "I can advance you a third of next month's allowance if you are sure you can get on with that with what comes to you on the first of May."

"I will have to try to," Isabel told him. Then, impulsively, before her courage should fail, she added: "You know, John, you said you would help me about buying my clothes when I needed them. I need them now."

John glanced at her neat dress and trim figure. "I think you look very nice in the frock you have on," he said. "There's nothing the matter with that."

She sighed impatiently. "That's always what a man thinks," she complained. "You forget that this is a Winter dress, and that except for getting a cheap little straw hat for everyday wear I have not bought a thing for Spring. And it's not fair, John."

"No," he said soberly, "perhaps it isn't. On Saturday I can let you have ten dollars toward your clothes. But that is all."

Ten dollars! What a little way that would go! Well, she could not get more just now, so there was no use in bothering about the matter further, she must do somewhere for the things she needed.

Then she was cover with her needle and had a knack of "making over." She was able to remodel two of her last Spring's dresses so that they were stylish and pretty. She also bought a pair of new shoes. This done, she thought again of her dinner, and wrote her invitations—although she had no new evening gown.

Her guests were to be the Kerrises, Ella Sanger and David Duval. She did not mention there two last names to John until all had accepted. Her husband looked doubtful when she told him who was coming.

"My dear," he said, "I wish you had consulted me before asking any man here. Still, Duval's all right. I like him better than Dennis. Dennis makes himself ridiculous by his devoted manner to women. I sometimes wonder how so sensible a woman as Adelaide Simmons stands having him around so much."

"I think that he is an old friend like yourself—isn't he?" she suggested in an innocent manner.

"Perhaps so," he rejoined, ignoring the note of irony in her voice. "As to your other guests—Mr. and Mrs. Ferris and Ella Sanger—have they accepted?"

"Yes," Isabel replied. "They all accepted with apparent pleasure."

You remember that Ella Sanger is Adelaide Simmons' cousin," John said. "Do you think you can invite her without Adelaide?"

"I have done so," Isabel replied.

"Does Ella know that Adelaide is not coming?"

"I did not tell her—but I don't care whether she knows or not. I do not consider it necessary to consult my friends as to whom I shall invite to my home."

"I was only afraid," John ventured, "that Adelaide might think that her cousin was invited and she was not."

JOHN FAILS TO AVOID A STINGING REMINDER

There was a long silence. Isabel felt her temper striving with her patience and wondering for a moment which could get the upper hand. She closed her lips firmly, resolved not to put herself in the wrong by being the first to speak. If she said nothing John might drop the subject or drag it in by force.

He took the latter course—after a preliminary clearing of his throat. "It seems to me," he began awkwardly, "that since Adelaide and Ella were both at our first dinner, it might look a little queer if one was asked not without the other. I mean"—as Isabel did not help him out by agreeing or disagreeing—"that perhaps Adelaide's feelings might be a bit wounded if a member of her family was asked and she wasn't. Don't you,"—with an embarrassed cough—"don't you really think so yourself, my dear?"

"To be frank, John"—and once more Isabel's tone had the calm quality that had baffled him of late—"I hardly think that Mrs. Simmons can feel hurt if we ask her cousin and not ask her. For, you know, there are occasions when she asks my husband and doesn't ask me. So I think she would understand kindly I do."

He Admired Him

The story is told of a railway manager who made a tour of inspection of the stations on his line. The time of his coming being pretty well known, he found every station a very hive of industry, everybody and everything looking like mad. There was one exception. At one station he found the station master with the best clothes, sitting in front of a bright fire, smoking a cigar and reading the papers. Everybody else about the station was working hard, but there was an air of peacefulness about the station master which seemed to indicate that he, at least, was not doing any work.

"Are you going to sack him?" whispered one of the men who accompanied the manager.

"Sack him?" exclaimed the manager. "Certainly not."

"But why not?" asked the other, in surprise. "He's just sitting there and getting others to do his work."

"My friend," said the great manager, impressively, "the man who can persuade somebody to do his work while he himself sits idle—well, he's the man for my money!"

A MAN AND HIS WIFE — John Stumbles Into Another Row With His Wife

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER XLI.

Copyright, 1916, by the Ridgway Company.

WHEN all the dinner bills had been paid Isabel had only enough money left to run the house very simply until time for the next allowance to fall due.

Jennie, like many other excellent cooks, had "a free hand" with butter and eggs. Try as she would, the housekeeper could not live as cheaply as during Cynthia's regime. Then, too, the laundress ate a good deal. She must always have meat for luncheon, she said, and even that extra item on Monday and Tuesday made a difference in expenses.

Yet Isabel was determined to give her dinner as soon as Mr. Ferris had returned from his business trip. Therefore, before a fortnight had passed she asked John if he could advance some money to her.

"Why, my dear," he said, "what's the matter?"

"Several things," she replied. "One of them is that I want to give my little dinner soon. It is to be a very small affair, you know. I need some new clothes now."

John looked grave. "I don't understand," he mused. "How it happens that our daily expenses are so much more than they were a year ago."

All Series "B" Votes Must Be In Today

CONTEST DEPARTMENT OPEN TILL 5 P. M. TO RECEIVE THEM

This afternoon at 5 o'clock sharp the Series "B" ballot boxes will close in the American's Great California Tours Contest.

The importance of a good showing in Series "B" cannot be overestimated. Since Saturday's announcement that the first vote standing will be published immediately after the Series "B" coupons are counted, tabulated and checked, everyone knows just what to expect and realizes how necessary it is to occupy good positions in this first printed vote standing, which will include all votes polled in Series "A" and Series "B", up to and including today.

More than one-third of the contest is now over and before you realize it, some twenty-five among you will be listening to the conductor of the American's DE LUXE Pullman train shout "ALL ABOARD FOR CALIFORNIA AND THE EXPOSITIONS!"

The time for fussing about what your competitor may be doing is done by—it's now a case of MAKE EACH DAY COUNT.

Don't worry about the number of votes "the other fellow" may have—let him do the worrying about YOU—and remember that while he is wasting his valuable vote-gathering efforts trying to find out what your progress is, YOU, if you are wise, will be piling up your vote total every minute of every day.

Another page of candidates' photographs next Sunday and the last of the big 10-vote coupons in Series "C".

The offices of the Contest Department at No. 5 Winthrop square are open daily from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., and the Contest Manager will welcome candidates at any time and assist them, each alike and impartially, in every possible way towards success in this remarkable competition.

Come in and talk over your campaign—if possible, let the Contest Manager show you where you can improve upon your vote-gathering methods.

Today is the day. All votes must be delivered or in the mail at 5 o'clock this afternoon. But before sending in your votes, read the Contest Rules carefully, so that you will not, through carelessness, lose any hard-earned vote credits.

CONTEST RULES—Read Carefully

THE CONTEST—The Boston American's California Expositions Contest is a voting competition which is open to every man, woman and child (over 18 years of age) in the United States, employees of the American and their families and relatives. The contest begins Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ends Saturday, July 3, 1915.

THE PRIZES—Twenty-five De Luxe trips to the California Expositions and FIFTY DOLLARS in gold to each of the 25 trip winners will be awarded.

THE CANDIDATES—Every man, woman and child over 18 years of age who is a resident of New England, is eligible to compete, except employees of the American as stated above. Participation in any previous American contest does not debar anyone.

THE ENROLLMENT—Every candidate must be regularly enrolled from his or her permanent address on the enrollment blank printed in the Boston American Daily and Sunday or a copy thereof.

THE VOTES—Every day during the life of the contest, beginning Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ending Saturday, July 3, 1915, a coupon will appear in the Daily and Sunday American which will count for votes.

The Daily American coupons will count ONE vote and the Sunday American coupon will count TEN votes.

The contest will be divided into 7 periods, and the coupons, during each period, will be numbered and lettered as follows:

1st period—Series A No. 1 to A No. 15—appearing March 27 to April 10.
2d period—Series B No. 1 to B No. 15—appearing April 11 to April 25.
3d period—Series C No. 1 to C No. 15—appearing April 26 to May 10.
4th period—Series D No. 1 to D No. 15—appearing May 11 to May 25.
5th period—Series E No. 1 to E No. 15—appearing May 26 to June 9.
6th period—Series F No. 1 to F No. 15—appearing June 10 to June 24.
7th period—Series G No. 1 to G No. 8—appearing June 25 to July 3.

DOUBLE VOTE VALUE will be given for each consecutive SERIES turned in within one week after the appearance of the last coupon in each series. For example, Series C No. 1 to C No. 15, inclusive, will count as 66 votes, if received in one package as directed below, or 30 votes if received in two packages not consecutively numbered, will count as only 15 votes (their face value). But in any event, the one-week time limit must be turned in not later than 5 P. M., May 17, 1915. All coupons received after this time will be refused; a similar rule applies to the other four SERIES.

Votes cast on daily during each period will count only for their face value.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt of same by the American.

The vote value of coupons will remain unchanged throughout the entire contest.

HOW TO SEND VOTE COUPONS—At the end of the third contest period, collect all coupons that you have cut from the issues of Series A, Series B, Series C, inclusive, tie or fasten them in some manner and attach a slip of paper stating the number of votes (Series A, No. 1, coupons contained in that package. Do the same with "Series C No. 2" coupons, and the same with "Series D No. 1" coupons, and so on, indicating and "Series C No. 15," the last one of that series. Then screw them all in one bundle and write or stamp, on the outside of this bundle, your name and address and the number of consecutive sets said to be contained therein.

WHERE TO SEND THE VOTES—Bring or send the Expositions Contest Headquarters at No. 5 Winthrop square (just around the corner from the American's main office entrance on Devonshire streets), or if sent by mail, send to American Expositions Contest, P. O. Box 2347, Boston, Mass.

THE WINNERS—The 25 candidates who receive the largest number of votes will be awarded the 25 prizes. In the event of total votes for any contestants who win being tied, similar prizes will be given to each winner so tied.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any packages or cash sent by registered mail or express.

No person can win more than one prize.

The American reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency which may arise. The Contest Editor will decide all disputed questions carefully and in good faith, and his decisions will be final and conclusive.

Heroine Faces New Torments in 'The Exploits of Elaine'

What fear of the refinements of cruelty. We are to see what it means to fear all and not confess closed prison.

Wu Fang, known to the morning for his wily methods in The Serpent, released Elaine Dodge.

"You are surprised!" That is where the Chinese are so clumsily astute. Wu Fang, having sometime that morning seen Elaine being guarding in Wenty Mayo, a former tool of Percy Renwick's, had the fortune after a desperate fight to engage with which to not own life, replaced his mind. Said he: "Suffering is a state of mind. I have concluded that it would be but paltry revenge for the trouble you have cost me, to put you to death, or even to keep you a prisoner. You are free."

"You can really mean it?" she faltered.

He bowed low and ironically, and by a wave of his hand indicated that she was to go.

As she reached the door he commanded "Wait!" He made a cruel speech that would forget her memory all her days, and would torment her eighths. "This will be the judgment of Wu Fang. Slowly, one by one, your friends will weaken and die."

"Elaine, My Moving Picture Queen," is the title of a delightful new song just put on the market. Already it is being sung all over the country. It is dedicated to Miss Pearl White, and bears her autographed photograph in colors. The song is a rollicking one-step and is generally conceded to be one of the season's hits. It may be purchased at any music store, or a copy will be mailed postpaid by sending six two-cent stamps to the Star Company, P. O. Box 1740, New York City.

Rheumatism? Here Are Some Real Facts

How to Overcome the Torture Without Harmful Drugs.

A million of people have used S. S. S. and have overcome the worst forms of rheumatism.

This disease of the blood is little understood because of its strange symptoms, scarcely two people suffering exactly alike. And yet, no matter what its form or how painful and distressing, S. S. S. seems to have the same power in driving it out, relieving the torture from pain and starting the blood to coursing through the veins in its rich, healthful volume. The best explanation for this healing result is the fact that S. S. S. is entirely vegetable and therefore is an antidote. They are nature's providence to help.

Just as the meats, fats, nuts and sugars of our daily diet contribute to with nourishment, so does S. S. S. enter into the blood the exact medicinal requirement to clear the stream of impurities, tone the nerves and reconstruct the body if destructive germs have gained a foothold. Go to any drug store today and get a bottle of S. S. S. It will do you good. But be sure to refuse any and all substitutes. And if yours is a stubborn case, write to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 109 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. This department is presided over by a physician proud of his name by virtue of his distinguished family and a foremost doctor on his own merits.

"One Million Jews Needed in Mexico," Says Huerta

A Wise Remark. A Country Without Jews Is Something Like a Clover Field Without Bumble Bees

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

General Huerta, alumnus of the Presidency of Mexico, has been studying his country at a distance. He says that Mexico needs a million Jews.

Mexico needs a million Jews and other things, but for today let us discuss the particular needs that Huerta mentions.

Mexico needs hard, persistent commercial work, and that the Jews can give.

She needs the services of men who will continue to work hard after they have got money, and that the Jews will do.

What Huerta says today Cromwell could have told him more than two hundred years ago, and the Spaniards and Portuguese could have told him long before the days of Cromwell.

After Cromwell had chopped off the king's head and taken serious responsibility upon his shoulders, he was particularly anxious to make England a success commercially, well knowing that financial prosperity would cause other things to be forgotten.

So Cromwell repealed vexations restrictions against the Jews, made them welcome in England, gave them every opportunity. And the supremacy of England's commerce, the gigantic business that she does all over the world for the benefit of all Englishmen, of all kinds, dates from that day.

The Spaniards and the Portuguese, on the other hand, drove the Jews out and drove out prosperity at the same time.

If Spain and Portugal are miserable failures among the nations, wretched jokes from their schools to their governments, and from their farms to their factories, it is largely due to their driving out Jews through religious hatred.

You may ask "are the Jews better than other people?" No, they are not BETTER, but human beings have made the stupid mistake of imagining that they were WORSE, persecuting and destroying them because they happened to have religious opinions which do not quite agree with the religion WHICH WE GOT FROM THEM ORIGINALLY, or because they chose to live apart and manage their own affairs in their own way.

The Jews are not better than others, but others are not better than THEY, and the nation failing to recognize the facts suffers as Spain and Portugal suffered, and as Mexico, according to Huerta, is suffering now.

This earth needs all the different kinds of people on it.

In commerce the Jews are powerful, because the stupidity of government in the past would not allow them to engage in other occupations. They were forbidden to own land; they were forbidden by law almost everywhere to occupy public office; they could not, in short, own or control anything except money, which is practically invisible. Nothing was open to them save business, which depends upon the intelligence of the hour, the use of money, easily hidden, so they became business men.

And they are now to business in this world what the bumble bees are to clover.

You know, for we have told you, of the experiment made in Australia. The land was exactly the right kind of land for clover, so they decided to plant clover to feed the cattle.

The clover grew, but it died out. They planted again, and again it died out. Somebody who knew said to them, "Bring bumble bees from England, and your clover will live, the bumble bees alone understand fertilizing the clover, taking the pollen from one plant to another."

The bumble bees were brought in, and there is plenty of clover in Australia now.

After the Jews came to England there was plenty of prosperity clover for business men, that will happen in Mexico, undoubtedly, as Huerta suggests.

You Can Make Hens Work for a Living Also—

You Have Heard of the Machine That Makes the Hog Grind His Corn. Read This, If You Raise Chickens

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

Men who raise hogs or chickens know that the most difficult thing is to make the animal exercise, earn his living and thus live normally and as Nature intended.

Mrs. W. R. Thomas and her husband are about the ablest chicken farmers in the great Petaluma region.

Mrs. Thomas will tell you that the great difficulty when you raise hens luxuriously and want them to lay is to keep them exercising and working for a living. She says that when a hen doesn't work she doesn't lay so well, and doesn't feel so well—what a lesson for fashionable mothers.

Mrs. Thomas has not yet the feeder that makes the hens work, but she has a good idea. She has her roosts hung at one end on hinges. She hooks the roosts up to the ceiling of the laying house in the day time, so that the hens can't get at them.

This keeps them from going to bed prematurely, and they must keep walking up and down and exercising at least a little.

Also she makes her hen house twenty feet deep and eighty feet long, instead of ten or twelve feet deep and eighty feet long. This extra depth or width of the hen house, covered with fresh straw, gives the hens plenty of walking space. Make a memorandum of that, if you are in the hen business.

Just beyond the pig philosopher, in the live stock section of the San Francisco Fair, you find all kinds of chickens in a great chicken house.

There are Japanese chickens with tails so long that they have to sit on a high perch to keep them out of the mud.

There are more useful chickens, and the useful ones are now taught to work for a living. They have near them a little feeding machine. It has cracked corn enclosed in a very fine wire mesh. The corn cannot come out, but the hen pecks at it, hoping to get it. And in pecking at what she CAN'T get, she works a little machine, which causes a few kernels of cracked corn to drop down from the bin above her head. She thinks, of course, that she has actually knocked those grains of corn out of the wire, but she hasn't.

She picks up the grains that she has knocked down, and eats them. Then she goes to pecking again at the deceptive grain

Mysteries of Nature and Science

By Imagining a Shaft or Tube Driven Through the Earth, One Can Get a Clear and Vivid Conception of How the Strange Force Called Gravity Acts

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"SUPPOSE it were possible to drive a tube through a diameter of the earth; say start it down in Boston and have it break through in Europe. If I were to drop a weight down into this tube, say a cannon ball, since that is round, would it come out in Europe, and would it seem as if it were shooting up into the air?" M. S."

This problem appears to be a perennial favorite, possibly because it offers a sugar-coated method of learning something about the fascinatingly mysterious force called gravity. It is like the pointed questions sometimes asked by bright school children, which are the bane of learn-by-rote teachers, but the joy of the class, since they set the imagination to work.

Gravitation Explained

The writer of the letter correctly assumes that Europe lies diametrically opposite to Boston, but letting this error pass for the present, let us put his question in the shape evidently intended by supposing a tube, or shaft, driven straight through the earth, beginning at Boston and following a diameter, which means that it will pass through the centre of the globe. Such a shaft would come out in the ocean at a point southwest of Australia.

Now, according to Newton's law of gravitation the earth, as a spherical body, attracts bodies, above, upon, or beneath its surface as if its entire attractive force were concentrated in a mathematical point at its centre. This is the reason why a falling body, no matter on what part of the globe it may be, always moves toward the earth's centre, and it is also the reason why a person on the opposite side of the earth walks with the soles of his feet toward you, although he is no more upside down than you are.

Inasmuch, then, as the attraction which gives weight to bodies is focussed at the earth's centre, while our imaginary shaft passes through that same centre, it is evident that a ball dropped into one end of the shaft would fall at least as far as the centre. But would it fall farther?

There is an important circumstance which might lead you, at first, to think that the ball would stop when it got to the centre, namely that the action of gravity ceases at that point. At the centre itself there is no attraction, or, more correctly speaking, the attraction there is all outward and balanced in every direction.

Nevertheless, the ball would be moving with its highest speed when it reached the centre, because during its entire descent it would have been continuously pulled by gravity, though with gradually diminishing force; and so it would shoot past the centre and begin to ascend through the other half of the shaft. The force now driving it would be the momentum which it had acquired during its fall, and this (supposing that there were no loss through friction or air resistance) would just suffice to carry it up to the surface of the earth diametrically opposite to the point from which it had started.

A Short Pause

There it would pause for an imperceptible moment, and immediately begin to descend again, under the pull of gravity. Passing the centre once more, on its backward way, it would reappear at the Boston mouth of the shaft, and thus it would go on, shooting to and fro through the earth, but never emerging above the surface, unless it had been held above the surface when it was first dropped into the shaft.

All this, however, supposes that the resistance of the air in the shaft could be left out of account.

As a matter of fact, that resistance would be so considerable that when the ball reached the centre on its descent it would not have enough momentum to carry it up again to the surface, and it would begin to fall back before it had reached the end of the shaft opposite to Boston. On its second return it would be further retarded, and thus each of its successive swings would carry it to a less distance, until finally it would come to rest at the centre.

Now, returning to the supposition of a tube driven straight through from Boston to a point in Europe. A little consideration, or a glance at a library globe, will convince you that such a tube would pass thousands of miles aside from the centre of the globe, and that its direction at its middle point would be at a right angle to the earth's radius or the direction of the centre. Its deepest point would be at the middle, and there it would be only three or four hundred miles beneath the surface. Of course, a ball could not fall through a tube thus placed, but, if all friction were removed, it might roll through, passing to and fro, because the centre of the tube would be nearer the earth's centre of gravity than either end of it.

LIFE

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

ON a bleak bold hill, with a bold world under,
The dreary world of the common-place,
I have stood when the whole world seemed a blunder
Of dotard time in an aimless race.
With worry about me and want before me,
Yet deep in my soul was a rapture spring,
That made me cry to the gray sky o'er me,
Oh, I know this life is a goodly thing.

I have given sweet years to a thankless duty,
Were cold and starving, though clothed and fed
For a young heart's hunger for joy and beauty
Is harder to bear than the need of bread.
I have watched the wan of a sodden season,
Which let hope wither and made care thrive,
And through it all without earthly reason
I have thrilled with the glory of being alive.

And now I stand by the great sea's splendor,
Where love and beauty feed heart and eye.
The brilliant light of the sun grows tender
As it slants to the shore of the By and By.
I count each hour as a golden treasure,
A bead time drops from a slender string,
And all my ways are the ways of pleasure,
And I know this life is a goodly thing.

And I know, too, that not in the seeing
Or having or doing the things we would
Lies that deep rapture that comes from being
At one with the purpose that makes all good.
And not from pleasure, the harp may borrow,
That vast contentment for which we strive.
Unless through trouble and want and sorrow
It has thrilled with the glory of being alive.

How to Live a Hundred Years

By ELBERT HUBBARD

MAN is a dynamo. Also, he is a transformer and a transmitter.

Energy plays through him.

To degree he can control it, manipulate it, use it, transmit it.

And the secret of being a good transmitter is to allow motion to equal emotion.

To be healthy and sane and well and happy you must work with your hands as well as your head.

The cure for grief is action.

To have a body that is free from disease and toxins you must let motion equal emotion.

Love for love's sake creates a current so hot that it burns out the fuse.

But love that finds form in music, sculpture, painting, poetry and useful work is divine and beneficent beyond words.

That is, love is an inward emotion, and if stifled, thwarted and turned back upon itself tends to gloom, melancholy, brooding, jealousy, rage, disease and death.

But love that is liberated in human efforts attracts love, so a current is created and excess emotion is utilized for the good not only of the beloved but of the race.

Art is the utilization of love's exhaust.

The lover out of a job is a good man for a girl to avoid.

Safety lies in service.

All emotion that takes the form of ecstasy, with no outlet in the way of work, is dangerous.

This way horror lies. Emotion without motion tends to madness and despair.

Expression must equal impression.

If you study you must also create, write, teach, give out.

If great joy has come to you pass it along, and thus do you double it.

You are the steward of the gifts the gods have given you, and you answer for their use with your life.

Do not obstruct the divine current.

The college that imparts knowledge, but supplies no opportunity for work, is faulty in the extreme.

A school that does not supply work as well as facts is false in theory and wrong in practice.

Its pupils do not possess health, happiness or power, except on a fake.

Emotion balanced by motion eliminates dead tissue and preserves sanity.

For lack of motion congestion follows.

All sickness comes from a failure to make motion balance emotion.

Impress and express; inhale and exhale; work and play; study and laugh; love and labor; exercise and rest.

Study your own case and decide to get the most out of life.

Sickness, unhappiness, ignorance—all tend to inefficiency.

And inefficiency is sin.

Realize that you are a divine transformer.

Make motion equal emotion and you will eliminate fear, round out the century run, and be efficient to the last.

And to live long and well is to accept life in every phase—even death itself—and find it good.

The fear of death tends toward death.

"That which I feared has come upon me," said Job thirty-five hundred years ago. And the same is true today.

People who are willing to go or stay stay a long time.

When we learn how to accept life and find it good then the average man will live to five times the length of time that it takes to reach his maturity; that is, five times twenty, or one hundred years.

You Can Make Hens Work for a Living Also—

inside the wire. So she keeps the machine working and KEEPS HERSELF EXERCISING.

It takes the hens—so the hen man says—just exactly one minute to learn to work this machine.

As you study the roosters, you discover that it takes them less than half a minute to find out that they can stand around, let the hens do the work, AND SWALLOW RAPIDLY THE GRAIN AS IT FALLS AFTER THE HEN HAS MADE THE MACHINE WORK.

This world, it may be observed, is full of men who have learned the trick that those roosters are learning.

These machines for making hogs and chickens live as they should are among the minor features that will interest you, if you travel to the exposition in San Francisco which glorifies the opening of the Panama Canal.

You will be more interested, of course, in the Glacier National Park, the Yosemite Valley, the great telescope on top of Mount Hamilton. But being an intelligent being, you will see everything, from the great telescope to the hog and chicken feeding machines.

You will take your family with you, and learn enough to pay you well for the journey.

P. S.—Remember that railroad fares have been cut in two, and living in San Francisco is cheaper than in any other big city. Hotel rates are remarkably low. No good excuse for staying at home.
